ADMIRAL SHUFELDT DEAD

Distinguished Naval Officer Expires at His Home Here.

A CAREER OF BRILLIANCY

Active in the Organization of the Steam Commercial Marine Service of New York-Commanded Many War Ves seis During the Rebellion and Participated in Important Battles.

RearAdmiral Shufeldt died at his resi dence in this city at 10:25 o'clock this

The death of Robert Wilson Shufeldt closes a naval and diplomatic career of exceptional brilliancy.

He was born at Red Hook, Duchess county, N. Y., February 21, 1822, and entered the naval service as a midshipman from his native State May 11, 1839, making his first cruise in the frigate Potomac, being attached successively to the Brazil station, to the brig Bainbridge, to the home squad ron as acting master, and to the naval school at Philadelphia, being promoted to passed midshipman July 2, 1845. He served as chief officer of the United States mail steamers Atlantic and Georgia, 1848-51, was commissioned as lieuten-ant in 1854, and resigned from the naval service that year.

While out of the navy he was active in the organization of the steam commercial marine of New York, superintending the building of and commanding the steamers Black Warrior and Cahawba.

BEFORE THE WAR. For a year he was engaged in attempting to open a transit route across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, and just before the commencement of the civil war he was com-"Quaker City," plying between New York and Havana, when he was nted consul-general to Cuba by Presi-Lincoln. At the outbreak of hostilities he promptly volunteered for naval duty, was appointed Younteered for havait unit, was appointed the theurenant, and ordered to command the "Quaker City," that ship having been turned over to the United States government. Secretary of State Seward had him at once returned to Havana to perform important services, for which he was decined especially qualified, and which, it is believed, prevented much aid to the Con-deemed especially qualified, and which, it is believed, prevented much aid to the Confederacy from the Spanish colonies.

At the end of two years, having, under very trying circumstances, fuifilled the mission intrusted to him, he resigned the consul-generalship and accepted a commission as commander, which had previously been tendered him by President Lincoln

In 1862, while still consul general, President Lincoln and Secretary Seward intrusted him with a delicate diplomatic mission to the president of Mexico. At this time the French troops were in possession of Vera Cruz, and the duty was accomplished was senior haval officer in the attack of Saint Marks, Florida.

In 1865 and 1866 he commanded the flagship Hartford, and from 1866 to 1868 the Massachusetts on the Asiatic station.

After the naval rendezvous in New York, in which he participated, he received his commission as captain December 31, 1869, and wasplaced in command of the Miantonomob. wasplaced in command of the Miantonomoh and had charge of the Tebauntepecand Nica ragua surveying expedition in 1871-72.

MAPPED OUT THE NEW NAVY. Bubsequently he was urgently requested by the Chinese Emperor, through Li Hung Chang, to take command of the Chinese navy and coast defenses, and was made onorary adviser to the empire. He declined these honors, with their attractive emoluments, preferring to remain in the United States service, but upon his advice Li Hung Chang fortified Port Ar-thur as the chief strategic point of the coast line. On his return home he was made president of the Naval Advisory Board.

Indianapolis, Nov. 7.—Gen. Harrison re-turned last evening from Chicago. When asked for an expression on the result of the elections, he repiled:

If startling news from Armenia has reached the State Department in any official form, that fact cannot be ascertained. It has been known for some time through other channels that Secretary Olney issued instructions to Minister Terrell some time ago to take vigorous measures for the pro-joint intervention by Great Britain and the United States. Mr. Terrell immediately proceeded to motify the Turkish government that it would be held responsible for any injury to American life and property. But no new warships have been sent to s supernumeraries.

The disbandment of Company B, Fourth Battalion, was not unexpected. At camp but few members were present. The company itself has been made up of men who had grievances, and its going to pieces was expected long ago. It is only due to the for bearance of Maj. Campbell, of the Fourth, that it has existed as long as it has. Company A. Sixth Battalion, has been a source of trouble and annoyance at headquarters for the past five years. Maj. Bartlett has co sorteet has complained on numerous occa-sions, and Gen. Ordway told him long ago to end the entire matter by disbanding the command. But Maj. Bartlett is one of the biggest bearted officers in the brigade, and he always was ready to give the boys an-other chance. At present the company vir-tually consists of one licutenant.

LIKEA THUNDERCLAP But the thunder clap from the clear sky is the consolidation in the Third battalion.

No one expected it, and it is only a precursor of another change.

Some months ago Inspector General Alexander was detailed by Gen. Ordway to thoroughly investigate the condition of the Third battalion. He was engaged in these duties a long time, and it was understood that he recommended radical changes. The recommendations have borne fruit.

At camp last June nearly all the complaints of misconduct came from this battalion. It was whispered at Fort Washington that Gan Orders, excluding the residual of the contract negron that den. Ordway seriously considered placing one of his staff officers in command. The last night of the camp the other battalions stood ready to march any company of the Third into the Fort if there was an outbreak of deviltry. The command is largely made up of boys, and trouble For these reasons and on account of other complaints, Maj. Alexander began his four finspection. It was a most thorough one, and the result is now made public. Shortly after his report was handed in several other papers in the city made laughable guesses Company B, under command of Capt. conard H. Mattingly, is known as the emmon Rifles. The boys are making great preparations for an entertains o be given this month in Metzerott Hall

Consolidation was the farthest thing from their thoughts. The news comes to them in the nature of a shock. Company C is under command of Capt. ayer. At present he is on sick Many complaints were made about his com-pany in camp. In the light of these events it seems a good thing that two companies were transferred to the Third last spring. Had this not been done the Third would be onto a vistage.

GEN, ORDWAY'S VIEWS. "No more new companies fo rthe guard, said Gen. Ordway, when asked the meaning of these changes by a Times representative. "We have as many now as we can take care of. Yes, the Third and Second must remain, as two-company battalions and the Fourth and Sixth as three."

"I have found that a certain number of men in the District belong to the National Guard. In the past cight years the average is the same. The only ques-tion I had to decide was the best way in which to take care of that average. The formation of new companies became a nuis-ance. When we looked over the enlistment ance. When we looked over the enlistment papers we found the same old names there. So the question resolved itself into the form just spoken of.

"The next point was whether I should reduce the number of tattalions and make each regiment consist of two. After studying the matter in all its bearings. I concluded to keep each regiment as it now is. The three battalions will remain as the skeletons for regiments in time of trouble. "I think the changes will have a good effect. It will raise the tone of the guard. The various companies will fill up to their full strength. We will be able to get and keep a toll complement of officers, and I expect to see a healthy growth."

Quay and Cameron Are Again Hobnobbing Together.

There Had Been Coldness Between Them for Some Time-The Senator Wants Convention at Pittsburg.

Senator Quay believes that the choice of the National Republican Committee for the place for holding the next national conven-

The Senator was in Washington for a short time yesterday. He came during the afternoon and left at night for Fiorida, where be will remain until Thanksgiving and possibly longer. When it was suggested to Senator Quay that the presence of Senator Cameron in his Florida house party would excite some comment, be laughing replied: "Yes, I suppose that some people will say that Bon and I are plotting."

A coloness has existed between these two Senators for some time, as the result of a misunderstanding during the chairmanship struggle, and the prediction was freely made that Quay would be against Cameron when he comes up for re-election.

Heartrending Scenes at Wreck of Detroit Journal Building.

DOZENS OF BODIES DUG OUT

Force of One Hundred Men Engaged in the Awful Work of Recovery, and as the Lost Are Discovered Under the Mass of Debris, Waiting Friends, of Lost Ones Cry Out in Agony.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 7.-The progress on the men working on the ruins resulting from yesterday's terrible botler explosion was very slow after 2 o'clock this morning. from that hour until 6 o'clock only two more bodies were dug out of the debris. They were those of Adolph Scrieber, aged twenty-five, foreman Hiller's bindery, and John Gordon, aged thirty-two, stereo-typer, Detroit Journal.

A larger force of men were put on about 7 o'clock, and while the work is necessarily slow, it is progressing much more rapidly.

MORE BODIES DUG OUT. At 9 o'clock the searchers uncovered the nineteenth body. It was that of Jennie Neubauer, one of Hiller's employes.

Five minutes later the body of Bertha Weidbusch was dug out, and at 9:10 o'clock still another girl's body was recovered. It was badly burned, and was not at once recognized.

The cause of yesterday's frightful catas-

The cause of yesterday's reightful catas-trophe was settled beyond all question this morning, when the workers on the ruins got down to the boiler. The explosion was caused by a dry boiler.

By 11 o'clock twenty-five bodies in all had been taken from under the mass of debris, and three more had been ac'ded to debris, and three more had been acided to the list of the identified dead. They were John E. Breitenbecher, aged twensy-line, an employe of Hiller's bookbindery; Rose Morgan and Kittle Leonard. Miss Morgan was an employe in Hiller's, and Miss Leonard an employe of John Da-vis & Co. The two bodies unidentified as this hour are those of girls. DANGEROUS WALL The heavy east wall of the Journal build-ing proper is considered to be in an unsafe condition, and the fire chief has issued or-ders that the floors of the wrecked buildbe not disturbed. This will binder the work of rescue, as it is under these floors, it is before, as it is under these floors, it is believed, the majority of the missing will be found. It is altogether likely that the Journal building will be condemned and will have to come down.

and will have to come down.

One of the two unidentified bodies, supposed to be that of a girl, was identified by John Koerber shortly after 11 o'clock as that of his son John, a boy of seventeen years of age, who was employed at Hil-ler's. More than 100 men, all who can be used

More than 100 men, all who can be used to advantage, are at work this morning in the ruins, which are probably yet the tombof fifteen unfortunate men and women. They talk as they work, and the crowd talks with them. Suddenly a little group of workers hush and commence to remove timbers and brick with more care. They have found the foot of a girl. HEARTRENDING SCENES.

Quickly the news travels. The laborers talk in whispers, the drivers cease to urge their horses in loud tones, and the thou-sands of spectators are stilled. The word is whispered from lip to lip that No. 25 has been found; that it is the body of a girl. The little knot of workers around her fill baskets with rubbish as they uncover the body and quickly cover the mangled and distigured remains with a blanket. Out in the crowd, kept back by the police, a woman cries, "I know it is my girl; my God! Can she be alive?" At another point a little boy is silently sobbing and murmuring, "My sister, Oh, my sister!"

The remains are placed on a stretche and carried away to the temporary morgue. As the stretcher, borne by four policemen, turns the corner, the drivers yell at their horses; the foremen urge the men on to the awful task of finding another victim; the sightseeing crowds talk loud again, and speculate on who will be "No. 26."

No. 26 covered to be the bedry of Friest.

No. 26 proved to be the body of Ernest Parkins, a boy of 15, who was employed in the Journal mailing room. The body was found Jammed against the mexploded boiler. Shortly after this body was taken out, two others were uncovered, but at 12 clock they had not been dug out.

Steps are being taken to brace the bulg-ing east wall of the Journal building, so that the work of the reacuers can be exdited. Fireman Robert Henderson, of truck No. 6 was precipitated into a pit ten feet deer while working in the ruins this morning. He received a bad gash over the eye, and was in a stunned condition when hauled out. He was removed to Emergency Hor pital to have his wounds dressed.
